Indian History.

It would be interesting if we could know just what atrocities the Indians have committed in the bounds of what is now Pocahontas County. And when you come to think about it, the outrages committed by the Indians is the only feature that makes them remarkable. There was one pioneer of our county who was on the best of terms with the Indians. It was John Sharp, who lived where his son Jacob Sharp now lives, on one of the fine estates of the Edray district. Mr. Sharp died at the age of near a hundred years. The Indians always came to his house when in Pocahontas, and he always fed them. They made their appearance there when the other settlers had no idea that any Indians were in these parts. Indians whom he had never seen would come and make themselves at home, and there is no doubt but that he was known and protected throughout the various tribes.

His grandson remembers his telling of an adventure with an Indian. He had just killed a deer when an Indian suddenly appeared and said "Sharp give me that deer!" He offered him half, but the Indian would only allow him to take home enough for one meal, and the hide. As they were skinning the deer, the Indian cut off and ate a great mess of the raw, smoking meat. He shouldered the meat and plucked into the forest. He can easily be imagined as claiming the credit of having killed it when he reached the camp; this suggests that the hunter who bought some game on William's River, last fall, may not have been as original as he supposed he was.

At Edray is the site of the old "Drennin Cabin," which is the starting point of the "Gallagher Survey," the eastern boundary of which is thirty miles long, extending into Randolph County. The inmates of this cabin, Drennin and his wife, were attacked one evening by the Indians. Drennin hid in some bushes near the house and the Indians came right upon him, and he was about to give himself up, thinking he was discovered. He was mistaken, however, as they passed on and took his wife prisoner. He raised the alarm and a party followed the Indians so close, that they killed the woman on the Crooked Fork of Elk, about fifteen miles to the North. Some of the settlers beyond recognized her scalp, as she had wonderfully long black hair.

There is a legend, not fully substantiated, that Simon Girty, the diabolical white Indian leader, who perverted the great chief Cornstalk, whom the whites trusted, met his death in the Little Levels of Pocahontas County. The story goes that he came by alone seeking to hide himself, and that the women of the neighborhood caught and bound him and burned him on a log-heap, an end that was far too good for him. If we only knew this for certain and the place a monument would be erected there.

A Bad Break.

Congressman elect Huling, Mr. Alderson's successor from the Third district, is a frequent visitor to Washington these days. On a recent visit here he put up at the National Hotel, a favorite resort of West Virginians and Southern people generally. One morning he went into the hotel barber shop to get a shave. The colored barber who undertook the contract of mowing the stubble from the distinguished West Virginian's mobile countenance naturally started a conversation with his patron. His talk turned on the late election, and after expressing his opinions generally on the great Republican landslide, the barber remarked that the only man whose defeat he felt as a personal loss, was Mr. Alderson; of West Virginia.

This remark immediately interested Mr. Huling and aroused him from the doze into which he had fallen under the combined influence of the barber's manipulation and two-pitched voice. "So you knew Mr. Alderson, did you?" inquired Huling.
"Yes, indeed, sah," continued the barber, encouraged to find his customer taking an interest in his talk. "He was one of my regular customers, sah. He had a mug and brush here—they are up in this case now, sah,—and he was a mighty fine man. A big, handsome man, wid an easy face to shave, and a powerful good speaker. And I am mighty sorry he has departed, sah," said the barber as he proceeded to put the finishing touches on Mr. Huling's face. "And the worst of it is," he continued, "They say he was defeated by a no-account sort of fellow, who didn't know nothing, and who never would of got the nomination if he didn't have lots of money."

And the barber yanked the towel about Mr. Huling's neck, and that gentleman got on his feet. He looked at the barber with a quizzical expression in his eye, and remarked, "Well, I'm sorry your friend Alderson was defeated, for I agree with you he was a mighty fine man. But I don't agree with you that he was defeated by a no-account sort of fellow, and I'll tell you why, I'm the man who defeated Alderson."

Nothing but one of Edison's kites could possibly have done justice to the rapid changes of expressions on that darkey's countenance as Mr. Huling said this. He was too dumfounded to do more than attempt to stammer out an apology, and before he got fairly started Mr. Huling was gone. It is needless to say that barber does not expect to shave the member from the Third West Virginia district in the next Congress.

Congressman Alderson started for his home at Nicholas Court House to day, to be with his family for the holidays. Mr. Alderson has been endeavoring since he returned here to get a definite promise from the members of the house Judiciary Committee that the West Virginia direct tax bill would be pushed at this session, but he has obtained little satisfaction. The members of the committee are willing enough to undertake doing what they can to get the bill through but point out that pressing for passage, it is almost hopeless to expect to get time for the West Virginia bill. If the Republicans would not filibuster against it, there would be no trouble, or it might be put through in half an hour under suspension of the rules. But with the Republicans ready to fight it at every step, it would take hours and perhaps days to pass it.—Wheeling Register.
